In 80% of sexual assaults against the elderly, the victims know their attackers.

How to help an elder who has been sexually abused:

- Check on the elder’s safety.
- Believe what they are saying.
- Tell them it is not their fault.
- Help them report the crime to law enforcement.
- Encourage them to seek counseling.
- Contact your local certified rape crisis center.
- Don’t delay – it is everyone’s duty to report elder abuse.

Please begin the conversation today with an elder you know and help us put an end to elder abuse.

If you or someone you know has been the victim of sexual assault, please call your local sexual assault hotline at (888) 956-7273.

It can be physical – someone hits you, threatens to hit you.

It can be sexual – someone intimidates you in a sexual way, forces you to watch “dirty movies,” or someone hurts you in a sexual way — rape.

The most common perpetrators are family members and caregivers.

What can you do?

Elders are afraid to speak out because they fear no one will believe them, or they may fear:

- being put in a nursing home
- having their medication withheld
- being abused further by the perpetrator
- losing their family relationships if they tell what is going on
- having to tell their story to strangers, like the police
- having to go to court

They may feel as though they do not matter. Despite all these concerns elders are reporting to authorities and getting help.

From the American Medical Association:

Has anyone touched you without your consent?

Has anyone ever made you do things you didn’t want to do?

Has anyone ever hurt you?

Are you afraid of anyone at home?

From the Florida Council Against Sexual Violence:

Has anyone ever forced you or frightened you into having sex?

Has anyone forced you to watch pornography?

Is the person who made you do these things living with you?

Symptoms of Elder Sexual Abuse
